Blood Drives Club merge to American Red Cross Club

Student Organizations & Clubs : Monday February 17, 2020

Hello Bobcats! We are looking to convert "Blood Drives Club" to the American Red Cross Club.

This is a service organization officially recognized by the Red Cross, and we are in need of new members as well as officers. There is no experience required, and any major can join. The club will be involved in blood services, disaster response, international services, service to Armed Forces, and fundraising and marketing efforts. There are also scholarships, certifications, career connections, resume builders, and many other benefits to being apart of this club.

We will have an info meeting this Wednesday the 19th @5 in GIVE. See you there!

Something to Die For: Mencius on What People Really Want - A Special Talk with Franklin Perkins

Philosophy Religion & Liberal Studies, Department of : Monday February 17, 2020

The ancient Confucian philosopher Mencius (Mengzi 孟子) claimed that everyone has things they would refuse to do, even if refusing would lead to death. That is, everyone has something they would die for. If true, this is a profound observation because it means that ultimately, our deepest concerns are not for our own self-interest. In addition to discussing this claim, the talk will also examine the seemingly paradoxical fact that while many of us would risk our lives to help a person in danger, we often resist minor sacrifices that might greatly benefit others.

Franklin Perkins is a Professor of Philosophy at the University of Hawai'i, Manoa. He received his Ph.D. from Pennsylvania State University and has been a professor at Nanyang Technological University (Singapore) and at DePaul University (Chicago), where he was also director of the Chinese Studies Program. His main teaching and research interests are classical Chinese philosophy, early modern European philosophy, and the challenges of doing philosophy in a comparative or intercultural context. In the past few years, he has been focused particularly on the philosophical significance of recently excavated Chinese texts that were buried around 300 BCE. He is the author of Heaven and Earth are not Humane: The Problem of Evil in Classical Chinese Philosophy (Indiana, 2014), Leibniz: A Guide for the Perplexed (Bloomsbury, 2007), and Leibniz and China: A Commerce of Light (Cambridge, 2004), and he was co-editor (with Chenyang Li) of Chinese Metaphysics and Its Problems (Cambridge, 2015). His books have been translated into Portuguese, Chinese, and Japanese. He is editor of the journal Philosophy East and West.

Reminder: Documentary Screening - Pushout: The Criminalization of Black Girls in Schools

Philosophy Religion & Liberal Studies, Department of : Monday February 17, 2020

Pushout: The Criminalization of Black Girls in Schools is a feature length documentary which takes a close look at the educational, judicial and societal disparities facing Black Girls. Inspired by the groundbreaking book of the same name by renowned scholar, Monique W. Morris, Ed.D. The documentary confronts the ways in which the misunderstanding of Black girlhood has led to excessive punitive discipline which in turn disrupts one of the most important factors in their lives, their education.

A discussion will follow. Free and open to the public
