This Moment in Time : Celebrating National Make Music Day on June 21st

Music, Department of : Wednesday June 16, 2021

On Monday, June 21st at noon, the Georgia College Music Department will present a celebration for National Make Music Day on Front Campus. The world has endured a tragic year. Millions have died from COVID-19, and social, cultural, and economic life has been curtailed everywhere. With vaccinations accelerating, life in many places is on the road back to normal. But before life can feel truly normal, we must memorialize the devastation of the past year. Our response is an initiative called This Moment In Time.

Around the world, gongs traditionally mark a moment in time – whether announcing Napoleon’s funeral procession, the arrival of a Chinese dignitary, the start of a sumo wrestling contest, or the serving of dinner in a British mansion. For everyone joining or witnessing this event, This Moment In Time will mark the losses of the pandemic, but also the beginning of a new era in sight.

On June 21st at noon on Front Campus, members of the Georgia College Percussion Department will play the gong for one uninterrupted hour, marking the incalculable loss of the past year. Afterwards, the public will be invited to come up to each gong and play it themselves, hearing the unfathomable mystery of the sound, experiencing the cathartic feeling of hitting something massive, and feeling the deep therapeutic vibrations in their bodies.

Please join us this Monday for our celebration of International Make Music Day!
