Homespun Arts Council and the Arts & Sciences departments’ outreach, Naeemeh Naeemaei uses her visual art to address important issues, as seen in her piece titled “Blackacos.”

“Blackacos” is a two-colored screen print with a black to blue color scheme. It is created using a technique called “batik,” a method of applying dye to fabric that is blocked with wax. Wax is melted onto the fabric, and the areas that are waxed are preserved when the fabric is washed in water. The wax is then removed using heat, leaving the areas that were waxed with the dye. This method is used to create a variety of color effects, and each print is unique.

Naeemeh Naeemaei will present a public lecture on her paintings in the Arts & Sciences Building on Monday at 7 p.m.

GFC FRIDAY - OCT. 29, 2021

26
5:15 p.m., Voting Artst Scholar Lecture - Dr. Jeff Turner's talk: "A mountain of art. A mountain of science. A mountain of commitment. The mountain of what drives life."

27
1 p.m., SCV on Campus - Dr. Kimberly Tran on “The disconnect between the scientific community and the general public is one of the great challenges we face in my career path.”

28
5:30 p.m., Farmers Market on Front Campus

29
7:30 p.m., Georgia College Wind Symphony presents “A Jazzy Affair” in Russell Auditorium. For more information, please email music@gcsu.edu.