About the John and Margaret Terry Endowed Concert Series...

John and Margaret Terry both descended from distinguished New England families. John was an engineer who received his education at the University of New Haven in Connecticut. An accomplished sailor and veteran, his love of the sea was only surpassed by his love of music. His sailing voyages even took him to South America, which was considered a daunting passage by 1950s standards. He had a marvelously dry sense of humor and was an amazing punster.

Margaret was an executive secretary to the president of a worldwide corporation. A proud graduate of the Laurelton Hall preparatory school, she was an elegant woman whose refinement and sophisticated taste complemented and enhanced John's adventures through the Americas, the rivers of Europe, and the Caribbean.

John and Margaret's passion for music was lifelong. As world travelers, their taste in music was wide ranging. They were steadfast supporters of the arts. As season ticket holders for numerous venues, they often hosted many of their friends so that they could share their enthusiasm for the arts. Their legacy, to those who knew them, was that the human spirit is enriched when transported by the beauty of music.

The Gorzelany family established the John and Margaret Terry Endowed Concert Series at Georgia College to honor this legacy. We hope that the lives of Georgia College students and the greater Milledgeville community are enriched, inspired, and uplifted by biennial performances of the greatest works from the classical repertoire.
