Old Governor’s Mansion hosts second annual Doug Dillingham **

The Old Governor’s Mansion will host its second annual Doug Dillingham and High Tea, which commemorates a wedding held on the front porch of the Governor’s Mansion in 1839.

Gov. Joseph Brown’s daughter Mary Virginia had her two daughters married in a service officiated by the local Baptist minister, said Molly Randolph, curator at the Mansion. “Every woman and child in Millidgeville was invited to attend the ceremony and watch the couple walk up the front steps.”

African storytelling has been canceled.

Community members can take part in the classes at any point, as they are spread out over a three-month period to allow members flexibility. The classes are held at the Children’s Theater at the Mary Vinson Memorial Library. 29. All classes are from 5:45 to 6:30 p.m. The Forgivable French classes run every Thursday from 5:45 to 6:30 p.m. The Lauren’s Literature classes are on the second Thursday of each month from 5:45 to 6:30 p.m. The Great Women of World Literature classes are on the third Thursday of each month from 5:45 to 6:30 p.m.

GC summer classes allow students to stay on track for graduation

Georgia College is once again offering a wide selection of summer courses. These courses are not only for current Georgia College students, but residents of the middle Georgia area who attend other colleges and universities are also encouraged to take advantage of these classes to progress or to catch up with their peers.

"Students from Baldwin and the surrounding counties who may be home this summer can benefit by taking courses at Georgia College that will transfer to their home institution. This allows students the luxury of spending the summer at home, while continuing to earn credit toward their degree," said Suzanne Pittman, associate vice president for marketing and communications. "Schools in the University System of Georgia accept transfer credit, and there are courses that have equivalent degrees to transfer to many other universities as well. As a public university, Georgia College is able to offer summer courses at tuition rates that can be far more affordable than tuition rates of other institutions.”

GC Basketball’s Keys named to 2015 Allstate Good Works Team

The Women’s Basketball Coaches Association (WBCA) announced the 20 student-athletes who were voted onto the WBCA’s 2015 Allstate Good Works Teams® this week, including Georgia College’s Keys Keys. Keys, a three-time All-Peach Belt honoree that is known nearly as much for her community engagement activities, including but not limited to—volunteering at the Boys and Girls Clubs to help youngsters after school with their homework, making regular trips to help out at The Center in Macon, Millidgeville’s local soup kitchen and much more. The Allstate WBCA/NABC Good Works Teams® are comprised of 10 student-athletes, one from each of the NCAA’s Division I and II and the NCAA’s Division III Women’s Basketball Coaches Association.
